CONANT'S MILLS.

Affectionately dedicated to Aunt Lucy

Back to the old home coming,
To the scenes of long ago,
Where I see the sunshine falling
On the murmuring brook below;
The rustic bridge yet spanning
The stream in its ceaseless flow,
Onward, and ever onward,
Like the years that come and go.

I see the wild birds flitting
Among the maples near,
And their sweet song 'is my greeting
As I come to this spot so dear;
But no more I hear the splashing
Of the mill-wheel's labored whirl,
Only the clear brook glancing,
In many a turn and swirl

Against the old gate dashing,
Which stems in vain its tide;
Sweeping to deeper waters
Where speckled beauties hide.
Eddying, gleaming, dancing,
Like a happy child at play,
Kissing the fringing boulders
And the grasses along its way.

But gone is the mill and the miller;
Their life and labor is done.
Naught to do has the idle mill-stream
But to ripple and smile in the sun;
For no longer the toiling mill-stones
Shall grind here the golden grain,
Here no more shall the sturdy miller
Look out o'er these fields again.

the writer had more notes on the subject, but it is not likely they will ever be found. It will be noticed that numbers between 18, and 24 are missing.

Nicholas Munger, ^{junior} from whom is supposed to have descended all of the name of Munger through the United States, is supposed to have been born about the year 1630 or 1635. Little is known of his history except that he came to this country from England, or more probably from Scotland, and report says he came with a family of Chittinders at the age of 10 or 12 years, as an apprentice. It is supposed that he lived at the Frederick W. Scranton place at the Neck. Nothing is known of his having but two sons: viz. John and Samuel. He died Oct 17. 1660.

Addenda (next pages)

The above manuscript is remarkably correct for the most part, but there are some errors which, had the author investigated further, he would no doubt discovered.

In regard to the date of birth of Nicholas it is likely he was born about 1623, as it is stated he came to this country with a colony which settled at Guilford Conn in 1639, he being at that time about 16 years of age. As to his death Guilford records say he died Oct. 16 1668. It will be noticed that Walter P. Munger says Samuel son of Nicholas died Mar. 12, 1718 aged 56, which makes his date of birth 1662; corresponding date on old tree.

It is stated that Samuel (No 31) is supposed to have died young; yet W. P. M. mentions Rev Washington and Rev.

Dexter Munger, the first being son of Amasa Munger (not Cyrus.) and the latter son of Cyrus, both of whom (Amasa and Cyrus) are descended from Samuel,^[31] grand-son of Nicholas.

I have as yet no proof of the Mungers having come from Scotland notwithstanding it is the almost universal family tradition. On the other hand I find the name in its different spellings: Mongar - Monger and Munger in England, in the 16th century, they living in Stafford, Middlesex, and Surry counties. The colony which settled at Guilford were mostly from Surry and Kent counties, England.
